Ken Royal gave us an excellent presentation on the hazards of dust when we use power tools while woodworking. As woodworkers, we must be mindful of inhaling dust as we work, rashes and allergies from different species of wood and how to control and collect that dust. Bottom line woodworkers - protect your lungs, skin and eyes!

Show and Tell

Rich Sherman made this lap desk over 30 years ago. It is walnut with a Danish oil finish.

John Altholf finished this cypress garden bench just in time to be used this summer. There are 50 mortise and tenons and over 300 joints! The finish will be an exterior waterseal to protect it from the elements.

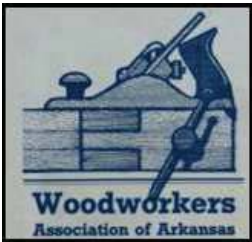

Angie Heifner found a pecan log on their family farm and had it milled. It turned out to be spalted. She made several shelf brackets that will be installed in the pantry of her new home.

Steve Hurd continues his quest to build very small boxes. He made these on a tablesaw! They were made from walnut and maple. He finished them with tung oil.

Hal Merriman turned these three pointed bowls. Interesting! The different woods are walnut, cherry, yellow heart, purple heart, maple and mahogany.
